HEALTH PROBLEMS DISCUSSED BY CO. ASSOCIATION HERE

80 Attend Second Meeting of Bucks County Public Health Association

SPEAKERS OF MERIT

Miss Laura Haines Re-elected
President; Localities
On Program

The second session of the Spring Meeting, Bucks County Public Health Association and the Bucks County Public Health Nurses, was considerably augmented in attendance yesterday afternoon by members of the Travel Club, the regular session of the latter club giving way to the health meeting.

Forty were present for the initial meeting in the morning, and the afternoon session was doubled in attendance. The presiding officer during the morning was Miss Ella McNeil, Philadelphia, director of nurses, South-eastern Chapter of American Red Cross; while in the afternoon Miss Laura Haines, of Doylestown, president of the Bucks County Public Health Association, was in charge. Both meetings were in the Travel Club home.

The afternoon speakers were: Miss Abby Choate, instructor of nurses, Philadelphia Hospital for Contagious Diseases; J. Clarence Funk, Harrisburg, chief, Division of Public Health Education; and Dr. Frank Lehman, a most active member of the Bucks County Medical Society.

Freedom of discussion marked the meetings, and after each address questions were asked by the audience and answered by the one delivering the discourse on the subject at hand.

Miss Choate, the first speaker in the afternoon, took up three types of contagious diseases, discussing each in detail. Scarlet fever was the first on her list, and complications were mentioned. Benefits of a long bed rest were told of, with at least 21 days of such being advocated, and a longer period should complications develop. Increase in the fluid intake was another part of the subject, and the necessary care of the skin, mouth and throat. "Nephritis is at a minimum if sufficient fluid is used" was one of the remarks of the young woman who has had wide experience with contagious diseases, and who added "Parents should be taught that an ear ache is something to consult a doctor about. There should be few drum perforations in home cases, and none in hospital cases as far as scarlet fever is concerned. Proper care is all that is needed. Whooping cough was the next disease discussed at length. The main complications of such were said to be malnutrition and pneumonia. The mortality rate was said to be five per cent. In this country, much higher than for scarlet fever. Vaccines are being more widely used today, stated the speaker. Miss Choate stressed the need of re-feedings should meals not be retained by the patient, the second feeding having the same caloric value as the first. The value of rest after meals was mentioned. "A child having this disease should rest for from one-half to one and one-half hours after each meal, either sit quietly or lie down." It was mentioned that the child should be shown that the adult knows the paroxysms can be controlled. Causes of severe coughing spells were mentioned, these including violent exercise, dust, drafts, etc. Among the most important complications of measles was mentioned bronchopneumonia. Such, the instructress of nurses said, actually causes more deaths than scarlet fever or diphtheria in the United States. Care of the eyes of measles patients was mentioned as being very important.

Mr. Funk, who is likewise editor of the bulletin, "Pennsylvania's Health," gave a most interesting address on "Public Health Education—Its Functions and Its Limitations." The wide use of "hokus-pokus" was roundly scored, as well as the gullibility of the laity. "Health education from an orthodox standpoint has fallen by the wayside," was one of the initial statements of this man who pleased with his knowledge as well as his wide vocabulary. "Many of the world's catastrophes have been caused by gullibility," he added. "Mass delusion is unfortunately an outstanding trait. Millions of people are bowing down to false healing gods." The health urge in advertisements in newspapers and magazines as well as over the radio was called to attention of the nurses, physicians and laymen in attendance. False health education as given by the "glib, foot-loose gentle-

"MOST PERSISTENT FLIER IN WORLD" IS NOT A PROFESSIONAL AVIATOR

Up Every Day for 2,000 Days
For Fun

By A. E. Lyons
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 4—(INS)—Twenty-five years ago one of those overgrown box-kite contraptions called an "aeroplane" appeared in Oklahoma City to thrill the citizenry with its daring flights through the air, somewhat akin to the breath-taking performances of the gent on the flying trapeze.

As it soared over the fair grounds the throngs on the ground craned their necks, and got them plenty stiff, no doubt. The "operator," a reckless fellow if ever there was one, sat at the controls of the well-ventilated "pusher," sometimes manipulating it to the alarming altitude of 500 feet.

Spectators looked on in fearful wonder. Some were certain he was a "danged fool who'd break his neck sure."

But to John Brock, 21, slight of build, unhandsome and rather shy, he was a hero. To be a flier became his consuming ambition.

"It's a good thing I didn't have the money at that time," related Dr. John D. Brock in his office, from which he directs a flourishing optical goods manufacturing business. "I might not be here now to tell about it."

It was 1921 before Dr. Brock had sufficient leisure time and money to warrant indulgence in his long cherished yen. He purchased a ship, and took instructions from Tex La Grone, noted local pilot, who has been in the aviation business since 1912.

"And I've been flying ever since," remarked the mild mannered pilot-business executive.

"But what about this record of consecutive daily flights you have been making since 1929?" he was asked.

"Oh, some of the pilots at the airport were arguing that there were many days during the year when a plane could not be taken off the ground. I decided to show them that a plane could be safely taken off and landed every day of the year, regardless of weather conditions."

And that's just what Dr. Brock, dubbed the world's "most persistent" aviator, has been doing. And in recognition of his unusual achievement he will be honored by the National Aeronautical Association in Washington, May 7, following completion of his 2,000th consecutive daily flight.

The hop will be made at Washington airport with Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, president of the association, as a passenger.

Governor Guy B. Park and a delegation of Kansas City civic leaders, including City Manager Henry F. McElroy, will accompany Dr. Brock to Washington. The group will make the trip in seven planes.

"I don't know what they are going to do to me," remarked Dr. Brock. "Guess I'll get a certificate or something."

On the walls of his office hung framed certificates of citation, plaques, emblems, miniature airplanes and other testimony of achievements in the field of aviation. The office itself will not hold all the photographs. Trophies fill several glass cases.

Waxing enthusiastic on his favorite subject, he told about his 6,000 acre ranch in Oregon county in the south—Continued on Page Four

ANNA VENTRIGLIA IS GIRLS' MARBLE CHAMPION

Second Warder Wins Highest
Laurels in "Mibs"
Shoots Here

BEATS DORIS STEWART

Anna Ventriglia, 12, the "mibs" shooter from the second ward, is the girls' marble champion of Bristol.

The highest niche was secured by this young player by virtue of her win yesterday over Doris Stewart, 12, of the sixth ward. Anna won the first set-6, 9-4, then lost the second game to Doris, 13-0, and the second warder came back in the third to win, 7-6.

Thus she is crowned the 1935 Youth Week girls' marble champion of this area.

The final game for the championship was won on the high school grounds. Both girls were evenly matched.

The spectators were held in suspense until the very last minute of the game, the score being tied, 6-6. Anna scored the winning shot, proclaiming her the victor.

Doris, a new-comer this year, representative of the sixth ward, showed remarkable ability and accuracy, and took her defeat like a true sportsman.

Anna, who placed third in last year's contest, showed considerable improvement in her game and was elated to find herself the champion this year.

TULLYTOWN

EMILIE

During the month of April, marriage licenses were granted to 203 couples at the office of the Clerk of Orphans' Court of Bucks County, at Doylestown, a decrease of 33 couples as compared to the same month in 1934.

Clerk of Orphans' Court Jacob Shelly, of Fountaineville, is of the opinion that "prospects" are waiting for the merry month of June, but in order to catch up to the all-time record established for the year 1934, there will have to be a considerable increase during the month of May. In June last year 300 licenses were granted at the Bucks County Court House.

Seventy percent of the 406 individuals to whom marriage licenses were granted in April were non-residents of Bucks county. New Jersey and Philadelphia furnished more than 50% of the non-residents.

The large majority of marriages in April were performed by Justices of the Peace or Burgesses.

There were 14 divorced men and eight divorced women granted licenses in April. The applicants, according to the marriage license docket, came from nine different States as far West as Spokane, Washington.

The majority of the licenses were granted to individuals whose are ranged between 21 and 39 years. Only five applicants were over 60. Bristol, with fourteen applicants, led the county, while Doylestown and Quakertown, with eight, came second.

Anticipate Tax Snarl

Harrisburg, May 4—Anticipating quick agreement next week on the $60,000,000 relief budget for one year, Capitol Hill today predicted Governor George H. Earle and Republican senators may find it difficult to get together on new taxes acceptable to both sides.

The next step in solving the tax deadlock appeared to be that of agreement on where the money shall be obtained. The issue is not only of raising $60,000,000, that much is needed for relief in addition to an amount about equal to that sum to balance the general budget for the biennium beginning June 2nd. As a result, next week may see only the relief question, or half the dispute settled, with the budget carried over for further conferences.

In any program of new taxes, Governor Earle has demanded inclusion of levies on manufacturers and utilities which the G. O. P. ignored in a substitute revenue program.

Senate leaders were considering, it was understood, pushing ahead with a program to finance relief before they tackled differences of opinion over the executive's "must" levies. The Finance Committee has sent to the Senate floor bills taxing cigarettes, documents and gifts which are estimated to raise $16,500,000 during the biennium. It was expected the corporate income tax and the income tax bills, amended to fit the Republican substitute program, would be sent to the Senate floor next week.

Edwards at Rockview

Rockview Penitentiary, Bellefonte, May 4—Robert Allen Edwards, 22, doomed killer of his childhood sweetheart arrived at Rockview Penitentiary where he will go to his death on Monday at 12.30 a. m. Neatly attired the gay Lothario, convicted slayer of Freida McKechnie, 27, an expectant mother, so he could carry on a love affair with Margaret Crain, 23, of E. Aurora, New York, a teacher, walked from his automobile through the prison gates, shackled to deputy sheriffs. Once inside, Edwards blvxxzgfzff.

ONE MEET RECORD FALLS AT YOUTH WEEK EVENTS

First Ward Miss Does 75-Yard
Dash in 9.3 Seconds
To Break Record

THREE EVENTS ARE RUN

One meet record was broken shortly after Youth Week track and field events got under way at the Bristol high school field this morning.

The girl who gained the honor is Duffy, a first ward miss who finished the 75-yard dash in 9.3 seconds, her time showing up well against the meet time for last year of 10 seconds flat.

Miss Duffy out-timed the winning boy in the same event. The seconds for the first boy being 10.1.

A slight drizzle did not dampen the spirit of youth. Boys and girls of all ages, totaling in the hundreds, appeared promptly at their stations as the events were called off. The field was well packed and fast and all events are progressing according to schedule, speaking well for the officials who are ably aided by high school boys and girls.

The first three events are recorded as follows:

Girls' Club A, broad jump: First, Petrick, sixth ward; second, R. Bewick, 6th ward; 3rd, I. Rogers, Crydon.

Boys' Class B, high jump: T. Manzo, 4th ward; N. Palumbo, 2nd ward, tied.

2 Men Caught in Raids; Report Liquor Found

Four agents of the State Liquor Control Board, two state police from Morrisville and Constable A. R. Atkinson, Doylestown, dropped into Bristol last night and raided two places here.

First the officers visited the place of Patrick Green, 38, 517 Bath street. Here they are said to have found two quarts of alleged liquor and some beer. Green's place has a store front and has long been a source of much comment and annoyance to the local authorities.

The officers next visited the place of Frank Wyno, 48, 307 Lafayette street. Here it is reported they found several pints of alleged moonshine whiskey.

Both Green and Wyno were taken immediately to Doylestown, where they were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. C. Hobensack.

Green was charged with illegal possession of liquor and held in $1,000 bail for court. He was placed in the Bucks County Jail.

Wyno was charged with illegal possession of liquor and held in $500 bail for a further hearing.

Mothers Honored By The American Legion Auxiliary

Nine mothers were entertained by the 35 members of American Legion Auxiliary gathered in the Bracken Post home, last evening, when "Mothers Night" was observed. One gold star mother was present, Mrs. Rieger, Cornwells Heights, and to her was a bouquet of sweet peas presented. Bouquets were also sent to the other two gold star mothers here, Mrs. Hannah Bracken and Mrs. Elizabeth Delker.

The business meeting was opened with singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner." Mrs. Harold H. Dettmer presiding. Mrs. Benjamin Ahart, membership chairman, reported 65 paid-up members, and asked that all dues be paid by May 14th.

Mrs. Harry Wessaw, a charter member of the organization, presented to Mrs. Robert Clark, Sr. on behalf of the auxiliary, a bar pin bearing the Auxiliary insignia, this being a birthday gift. Mrs. Eli Barnfield was named chairman of the May card party, her aides being Miss Anna Cullen, Miss Agnes Beaton and Mrs. Boyd. The social chairman for the next meeting is Mrs. I. Johnston Hetherington; and entertainment chairman Mrs. Fred Bryner. A delightful solo "Mother" was sung by Mrs. Wessaw.

The dramatic club presented a sketch, "Radio Station WXYZ," with the following participating: Mrs. Hetherington, announcer; Mrs. William Reynolds, office girl; Mrs. William Griffiths, Miss Tube; Mrs. Dorothy Fechtenburg, Aunt Amanda; Miss Evelyn Fechtenburg, Madam Dora Diver; Mrs. Ahart, Dr. Comen; Mrs. Dettmer, and Mrs. Thomas Livezy, the two professors.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

Work of One Republican

FERNDALE, May 4—The regular monthly meeting of the Republican Association of Nockamixon Township was held last evening in Ferndale Hall, and was marked by the great interest of the women of Nockamixon Township who were in attendance.

There were two speakers, James E. Groome, Yardley, president of the Bucks County Firemen's Association, who spoke on "Why I Am A Republican," and stated "The trickery of the Democratic leaders and the overconfidence of the Republican party were the two reasons why the Republicans lost the last presidential election.

"Honesty, integrity and stability," said the speaker, "were the beginning of the Republican party and will again be the salvation of the present conditions in which we find ourselves. The principles of Lincoln are constantly growing; today Lincoln is no longer a man of the United States, but belongs to the people of the world. For 75 years the Republican party looked after the interests of the nation and during that time we made greater strides than any other nation," concluded the speaker.

SATURDAY, MAY 4, 1935

NOT ALL UNDER DUST

So much has been said of the great damage done by the dust storms of the West that it is interesting to hear of regions in or close to their supposed center that have escaped. In Kansas, for instance, it is being pointed out by Governor Landon and others that by no means the whole state has been a victim. The state is so large that there is room for a decided weather contrast. Southeastern Kansas has been so wet that farmers were unable to sow much of the oats crop, and they are late with the spring planting for corn and other row crops. Western Kansas has been suffering from a drought of three years' duration. There has been a tendency over the country to regard the present dust storms as unprecedented, but older inhabitants of Kansas compare them with storms of forty years ago, and newspaper files of 1895 tell of dust storms that swept the state and stopped trains.

"There has been little permanent injury to the soil," Dean L. E. Call, of the Kansas State College, is reported as saying. "Western Kansas was laid down by the winds over a period of many years. The soil is many feet deep, a fine soil of unusual depth. In many years when the top soil has been swept away by the winds good crops were produced by the remaining soil."

In general it is asserted that the terrific dust storms have brought discomfort, but not discouragement, to Kansas. Reference is made to the April crop report showing forty-five counties in the dust area, while thirty-three of the other sixty counties have a better wheat crop prospect than a year ago. With the rise in prices in recent weeks it has been estimated that the farmers in the sixty counties will receive $60,500,000 for the crop this year, while a year ago they received $51,750,000. There are possibilities of over-optimism in some of these statements, but they are in cheerful contrast with wholly gloomy pictures.

TURN HOMEWARD

College officers throughout the land, as they witness the functioning of their erstwhile professors in the higher reaches of governmental power known as the "Brain Trust," must experience the sensations of fond parents who see an offspring make good in the big city. Success, however, is not always lasting in the fitting shadows of the capitol dome. Brain Trust membership may be best described as "here today, gone tomorrow."

But the Brain Trusters, having reordered the affairs of the nation, should be allowed something to do. Most of them are too young to be put on the retired list. The colleges have a prior obligation in the matter and now should look to discharge of it in some practical way—to the devising of which the returning Brain Trusters certainly should be able to contribute.

There's nothing dangerous about crossing the street in front of a car. It's a tie that's dangerous.

First you fear civilization is doomed and then you see the new millinery and don't much give a darn.

With animals are that way, too. Buck deer always fight one another instead of combining against the wolf.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES ARE ANNOUNCED FOR THE BRISTOL CHURCHES FOR SUNDAY

Bristol Gospel Mission

The second anniversary of the Bristol Gospel Mission will be marked during the coming week. This mission, located at 117 Otter street, has had a year of successful service. During the winter a band was organized which now numbers 39 pieces. The object of the band is to aid the young people of the community in finding a good environment, and to furnish a high type of musical entertainment. A series of concerts under leadership of band-leader V. E. Jacobson is planned. The first will be at the corner of Monroe and Farragut, Friday, May 10th, from seven to eight o'clock.

The anniversary services follow:
May 4, at 2 p. m., Men's Bible Class, Paterson, N. J.; May 5, 3:30, Berean Young People, Berean Church, Philadelphia; May 6, 7 p. m., Young People's Meeting, visitors' night; May 7, 8 p. m., Rev. Herbert Hoge, Berean Church, Philadelphia; May 8, 8 p. m., Rev. J. W. Oxspring, Bible Teacher, Philadelphia; May 10, 8 p. m., Rev. Health Problems Discussed By County Association Here men of handsome men who deliver free lectures on questions of diet, which are followed by paid lectures, which are heavily scored, as were also "the half-truths of these speakers which are clothed in scientific terms." "Many diet fads are innocuous and very dangerous, often leading to serious illness or even disease." The speaker stated that health education agencies have not been asleep, telling that such agencies have defined lines of work. He informed how health education is handled by the Pennsylvania Department of Health, by means of news releases, radio talks, the health bulletin which has a circulation of 27,000, motion pictures, addresses before lay audiences, and other methods. "Thus we are trying to spread the gospel of good health." The family physician was mentioned as being the one at the fore-front in health education. "One of the greatest ways it is possible for you and me to emphasize prevention of disease, and show high vitality is to so live we become living examples of right living."

Dr. Frank Lehman was the final speaker of the day, his subject dealing with "How to Make Motherhood Safe in Bucks County." It was brought to the attention of the assembly that in the past 15 or 20 years the hazards of motherhood have not been much altered. Figures from the office of the Pennsylvania Department of Health were quoted, with a decrease in mortality of mothers shown in recent years. "Bucks County has been running below the state figures in this respect," the local physician advised. Minimization of suffering at time of child-birth as civilization advances was one of the things touched upon, and the fact that child-bearing is now considered a high privilege, as against the idea of centuries ago that such suffering was the result of sin. "The mortality, while not high, can and should be lowered," said Dr. Lehman. "It is the function of the doctor to study the problems, sift the causes and lead the way to improvement. We must raise the standard of medical education of our physicians, and teach the laity to look upon approaching motherhood with profound respect." Medical attention throughout pregnancy is the desire for all.

Mrs. Henry A. Todd, Doylestown, chairman of the nominating committee, gave the following report: President, Miss Laura Haines, Doylestown; vice president, Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Bristol; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. John B. Chambers, Newtown. Business was discussed briefly at the opening of the final meeting; and Mrs. Harrison Holmes, of the Doylestown Village Improvement Association, reported on toxoid treatment given at the county seat.

During the noon-period luncheon was served to the nurses at a local restaurant; while others partook of a box luncheon at the club home, the Travel Club women serving coffee.

The morning speakers were Miss Ella McNeill; Mrs. John B. Chambers, Newtown; Dr. John M. Rich, Doylestown; Dr. J. Fred Wagner, and Miss Nora Jones.

Miss Jones told of medical and nursing work in the Bristol schools. She stated that "due to a shortage of funds, our health program in Bristol is not nearly so full as we would like to have it," adding that after a medical examination of the pupils by the school doctor, it was found that 42 children had serious eye conditions. As many of the children were from families who were unable to provide necessary attention, co-operation was given by Bristol Exchange Club, and eye-glasses have been purchased for several. Miss Jones mentioned that a full-time school physician examines the children once a year; mentioning that he is always available at any time during the day for emergency cases that arise. The children are weighed and measured three times per year, it was brought out. "When undernourishment is found, milk has been furnished by the Junior Travel Club. . . . Through efforts of Judges Boyer and Keller we have been able to procure the services of a psychologist and a psychiatrist, along with a welfare worker. This psychiatric clinic meets here once a month, and is established for the schools of lower Bucks County." The tonsil clinic held each summer was mentioned.

Mrs. Chambers was the speaker following Miss Jones in the morning. She dwelt upon the problems of the public health nurse and the committee working in conjunction with her. "A nurse should know the whole field in which she works and be responsible for it. And furthermore the committee should be able to tell the needs of the community. A broad understanding of public health is needed. It is not sufficient to know only our little community. We should look to a better organization in the county." She asked that it be remembered that public health nursing is bigger than the nurse or committee. "The nurse and committee are simply custodians of a problem that is of community, county and national width. It is our part as committee members to build, to help form new plans, and help the community needs."

Brief remarks were made by Mrs. E. Howell Windle, Morrisville, head of the Red Cross work in that district. Mrs. Windle dealt primarily with the work of a Red Cross board member, Miss Elizabeth Ross, Doylestown, told of activities of the branch committees of the Red Cross in the Doylestown area.

Dr. Wagner was called upon as the last speaker during the morning hours. Representing the Emergency Child Health Committee of Bucks County, he spoke of the "Child Clients of Relief," stating that a large number are suffering from malnutrition, although the percentage is not as high as in many other counties. The physician spoke in gratifying terms of the co-operation given by individuals and organizations in furthering the work along this line. He spoke of the need of centralization of information, with accounts of health activities being filed with the Bucks County Public Health Association. "Thus are ideas given to others." In dealing with the privileges of nurses in specific cases of illness the physician impressed the audience that the welfare of the patient is to be regarded above all else. In order to bring about the best of co-operation between physician and nurse written orders were advocated for the nurse. This idea has been backed by the Bucks County Medical Society, stated the Bristol physician.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cahall and family, Burholme, will be guests during the week-end of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cahall, 248 Monroe street.

"THE COLD FINGER CURSE"

by EDWIN DIAL TORGERSON

CHAPTER XXVIII

Departing from the restaurant, Montigny hailed a taxicab and was transported to the Hotel St. Cyril, in the vicinity of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-Ninth Street. On the way north he expanded odd moments in personal, rather amiably, of the evening newspaper headlines. They were ablaze with the crime.

When he telephoned from the lobby of the St. Cyril, Mr. Elderbank seemed hesitant about inviting him in.

"Here's some one here," explained Elderbank indecisively, and then, after a brief wait, "Oh, it's all right. Come on up, Captain."

The visitor to whom Elderbank referred was a saturnine individual whom he introduced to Montigny as Mr. Hovarty.

"Mr. Hovarty is a detective, too," said Elderbank in his soft and weary tone. "Every other person I meet, it seems, is a detective."

"Yes?" murmured Montigny, sizing up his man discreetly.

Victor Hovarty's eyes were sudden, crafty and downcast, and he had a habit of glancing up with them quickly and then of dropping his lids almost instantaneously. It gave Montigny the odd feeling that Hovarty found him full of surprises. He disliked the man instinctively, though Hovarty seemed striving hard to make a pleasant impression.

"He represents the insurance company," Mr. Elderbank explained further. "The Security Mutual Assurance, Limited. Naturally, they want to do all they can to help."

"Of course," said Montigny. Elderbank bade them be seated. Elderbank bade them be seated. Elderbank bade them be seated.

"I was down to headquarters talking things over with Sergeant Henderson," observed Detective Hovarty. "He gave me a line on what's been uncovered, but I thought I'd like to have a talk with Mr. Elderbank, too. He tells me you're from Montreal, Captain. Pretty different lay-out you find here, eh? Say what?"

"Quite. Have you any theory as yet, Mr. Hovarty?"

"No, except that a swell bunch of white collar bandits engineered this take. No amateurs, even if they did bungle it. And they'll be laying plans tomorrow or next day for the kick-back. Say what?"

"What is the 'kick-back'?" asked Montigny.

"Kick the ice back—return the jewels. For a consideration—ten per cent, maybe twenty, plus immunity. Say what? That's the way these jewel grifters work it in New York. They hate to fool with fences, and they like to keep a thing like this quiet. They didn't intend to didn't intend anything fatal in this business, say what? They figured probably Mr. Elderbank, or the insurance company or both, would rather pay a 'reward' of eighty-five thousand dollars, maybe a hundred and seventy, than to run the risk of losing it all—also, maybe, to avoid a lot of unpleasant publicity. Say what?"

"I see what you mean," said Montigny, impatiently. "And is this frequent?"

"Oh, is it? You'd be surprised. The New York jewel thefts you hear of in Canada, Captain, aren't the half of it, dearie, compared to the ones you never hear of. That's just it—the half of it, dearie. There's usually a dearie somewhere—and Popper or Mommer doesn't want a lot of notoriety. Say what?"

Mr. Elderbank coughed gustily over a cigar he was lighting. Montigny was not sure but that the old man's ears were reddening. Elderbank rose suddenly. His soft voice took on a cutting edge as he spoke:

"If any reference is intended, sir, to my unfortunate wife and Mr. Price Merriam, let me tell you this, you prying sneak—that man was employed by me, as a private protector, to do his best to prevent just what has happened."

nothing personal at all, sir. I was just explaining to Captain Montigny how jewel thieves usually work in New York. I didn't mean that when I said had any bearing on this case at all, sir. But I was just saying that if the case hadn't turned out—er—fatal, they would be throwing out feelers right now, offering to return all these stones if we'd pay 'em heavy enough reward. And I thought I'd just see how you'd feel about it, sir, in case they did, or—"

"Do you dare to suggest to me—" the old man was a bristling Hindenburg now—"that for the return of these cursed, miserable, damnable trinkets, I should consent that immunity be granted to the fiends who killed my wife?"

Hovarty spread his palms with a shrug. "I didn't say I felt that way about it, Mr. Elderbank. But you got to take in consideration how the company feels about it. An eight hundred and fifty thousand dollar loss isn't something to be charged off to P. & L. every other day without a kick, Mr. sir. And the company's got human stockholders, too—lots of widows and orphans, if you see what I mean—and it means something to them if their dividends get sawed in two, or maybe the company wrecked."

"I don't give a darn, sir," choked Elderbank, "whether your company is wrecked or not. If you came here to talk to me about any such underhanded criminal negotiations with thieves and murderers, I'll hand you over to the police."

"Oh, all right," Hovarty rose and got his hat. His tone was venomous now. "But let me tell you something while you're high-lifting me, you two-faced old slob. I know all about this dizziness you've got up in Montreal. . . . Say what? And all this upstage chatter about what a perfectly virtuous gink you are might sink in with this visiting fireman, but it doesn't get to first base with me. Say what?"

Elderbank seemed taken aback.

"And what's more?" hissed Hovarty, pausing at the door, "you don't want to get nasty again with me, see? If you do, I'll spill what I know."

Elderbank followed him into the corridor, waving Montigny back when the latter moved to follow.

"I'll handle him," said Elderbank, nervously, and closed the door carefully behind him.

Montigny shrugged his shoulders, pursed his lips. He walked to the window, gazed down musically upon the brilliant, ceaseless activity of the acre where Sherman on his tireless horse frowned upon the world's smartest.

"Not a crime passionel," muttered Montigny. "Surely not!"

Elderbank presently returned, apparently much calmer, though he said with no slight emphasis: "I told him a thing or two! We won't hear any more from him, the rat! Why, this town is astonishing. Captain—it's a nest of blackmailers, that's all it is!"

"Did he try to blackmail you, sir?"

"No, and he had better not! I'll go to the District Attorney with this, that's what I'll do. Why, I believe the scoundrel actually knows who committed this crime—I believe he knows where the jewels are!"

Montigny accepted a proffered cigar. "I think not, sir," he replied. "I think perhaps he is angling for a private reward—in case he is placed in a position to collect it. I am familiar with the 'kick-back,' as he calls it: I pretended ignorance largely for his benefit. The insurance company no doubt will offer a substantial reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of these people—but you're they are interested in primarily is the return of the stones. Hovarty, I think, would like to have you double the reward, which would offer a more inviting prospect to the thieves. But the man lacks delicacy—he approached you crudely."

"I shall consent to no 'immunity'!"

for the dogs, if the jewels are never returned," declared Elderbank vehemently.

Montigny reported in detail upon the events of the afternoon, and his auditor was intensely interested.

"Splendid, Montigny. If any living man can get to the bottom of this, I believe you can. But it is a terrible tangle, isn't it?"

Montigny shook his head. "Not so tangled, Mr. Elderbank, as it might be. Our circle of suspects is limited to those who were in fairly close touch with Mrs. Elderbank—who had access to information about her private telephone, who knew of the plans for her entertainment last night, who planned the crime carefully for a specific time."

"This man Thurber they have in jail—do you think he is guilty, Captain?"

"It is wholly possible, Mr. Elderbank. I have long since ceased, in my business, to be surprised at anything. But I do not, as a rule, associate crime with newspaper men. They know too much about it—they learn too much in their contacts with the police. They know too well that, eventually if not at once, the criminal pays. And I do not think that a man who would be shrewd enough to plot a crime of this character would be as enough to hide part of the loot in his rooms, in an obvious place where it would inevitably be found."

The old man nodded wearily. "Perhaps you are right, Captain. I must leave it with you. I am utterly spent."

"You are returning to Montreal tomorrow?"

"Yes, I believe the police are through with—all the unhappy details."

"The autopsy developed nothing new, I understand."

"Nothing—merely the main facts, which you already know."

Montigny bade him good-bye, promising to advise him promptly of any progress that might be made in the investigation. Elderbank shook hands warmly.

"It is good to know that you are to be here, Captain, when such men as this scamp Hovarty are at large. And I am going to leave you something to think about—something suggested by Hovarty. Let the insurance people offer any reward they wish for the recovery of the property; I don't care if it is never returned—it was the cause of my poor wife's death. But I am going to pay a reward to the man who brings to break the scoundrels who killed my wife—and the reward is eighty-five thousand dollars. I hope you collect it!"

Montigny made his way back to Waverly Place with this astonishing declaration ringing repetitively in his ears.

Eighty-five thousand dollars! Saure bleat! Nom du nom du nom! What would his good wife Marie, the portly and thrifty Madame Montigny—what would little Jean-Baptiste say—if he came back from New York the possessor of such a mighty fortune!

Montigny was a poor man. He had never hoped for wealth. He adhered to the homely philosophy that no man, however wealthy, could sleep in more than one bed at night, or eat, comfortably, more than three meals a day. If he clothed and sheltered his family, educated his boy, went through life in reasonable peace and contentment, a bit accumulating in the bank, his debts all paid, all necessities and a few extra comforts provided, and the perennial fascination of his daily work to insure him against boredom—what more could any man ask?

He compared his lot, instinctively, with the miseries of wealth—the blight of things coveted, the tyranny of things possessed, the waste and ruin of redundancy that had brought Violet Elderbank to her death, the old man to remorseful grief and shame.

Do You Hate To Meet People?

SOME of us are so bashful that whenever a new face appears before us we mentally duck away! Maybe it isn't shyness so much as simply not realizing how very interesting new acquaintances can be.

Some people are shy about new foods too. One family we know has had pork and beans every Saturday night for ten years, and they see no reason for changing!

How much more interesting life—and dinner!—would be for that family with a new kind of meat, a vegetable prepared some other way, a new style in dessert. New foods—new faces—brighten our days and help make living an exciting game.

Look through the advertisements in this newspaper today for new ideas in foods. They're here, in abundance . . . recipes, tried and tested . . . favorite platters of favorite people . . . exotic dishes from exotic lands.

The advertisements bring you up-to-the-minute news of many things. Read them regularly. Form the habit of getting the most out of life—and the most for your money.

BOCCE LEAGUE OPENS HERE TOMORROW P. M.

(By T. M. Juno)

The Penn-Jersey Bocce League will open tomorrow afternoon with three games being scheduled. On the St. Ann's court, St. Ann's A. will play the Tacony Independent Italian-American Club. On the Bristol Democratic Club bocce alleys, the Bristol Democrats will entertain the Bristol Bocce Club, and at the Tacony Italian-American Republican Club, Riverside will be the opposing club.

The teams will play five games to a match and all clubs will be required to be uniformed in caps and sweat jerseys. The referees have been assigned to the games and the first "pallini" will be rolled by the president of the organizations represented.

The circuit was organized early in April and from ten clubs it has been shaved to six, three of which are in Bristol. The officers of the league are: President, Louis Greco, Tacony; vice-president, Rocco Pacifico, Tacony; secretary, Michael Giordano, Bristol; treasurer, Robert Maradonna, Riverside; grand referee, Samuel Liberty, Bristol; first captain, Giuseppe Delucca, Bristol; second captain, Anthony Sabatini, Bristol; grand manager, Octavio, Luzzi, Bristol.

Captain Nicholas Sabatini, St. Ann's, announced that he has 31 players signed, and the following ten will be used: Frank Rich, Joseph Alta, Nicholas Sabatini, Andrew Marozzi, Peter Accardi, Alessio Lanza, Nizzareno Sabatini, Joseph Mariani, Joseph Missera, and Peter Indelicato. Samuel Moffo is manager of the team.

FANS HERE DO NOT SUPPORT BALL TEAMS

By T. M. Juno

Two of the three baseball leagues of this section have been started and the third will get under way here today. President Dave Landreth has thrown out the first ball on the opening night of the Bristol Twilight League, and also the Lower Bucks County League. Saturday, when Morrisville and Bristol play on Leedom's field, he again will wind up and throw the shiny horseshoe to the Hibernian pitcher.

The teams of Bristol and vicinity are barely meeting expenses to cover them to play baseball but still there are hundreds of fans who stand along the side-lines and turn their heads the other way when the bat is passed. Many of them can't afford it but still there are those that could. A closed-in field in this section would serve some of these free-customers right.

The Hibernians and the Edgely A. C., of the Bristol Twilight League, are the only teams that are without uniforms. St. Ann's will have new uniforms within two weeks. Every club in the Lower Bucks League and Delaware River League are completely rigged out.

After a lay-off of several seasons, "Johnny" McCarry is attempting a come-back with the Hibernians. A few years back, McCarry would pitch both ends of a twin-bill for the Hibs and win them both. Today he is in the outfield.

That foul ball hit by "Russ" Carman, of Tullytown A. C., in the opening game shot from the bat like a bullet. A spectator along the bank caught and prevented it from going into the center of the canal.

Two home runs in the opening games of the Lower Bucks County League. W. Ritter hit one at Newportville almost at the same time "Johnny" Dougherty, of Edgely, was hitting a circuit clout on Leedom's field.

"Henny" Donahar, who last season played with Cornwallis, is starring at the West Chester State Teachers College. Donahar will play with Bristol A. A. as soon as the summer vacation at school begins.

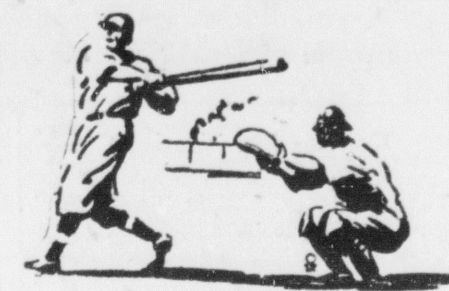

A youngster of Croydon, L. Rielly, who hurried for the senior team in the Youth Week baseball, has plenty of hooks and with a little training should go good in the Bristol Twilight League.

Morrisville and Washington Crossing play on Leedom's field today and Sunday, respectively. The Hibernians play Edgely on Sunday at Edgely while Halmerville's only week-end home game will be with Washington Crossing on Saturday.

Women are taking a keen interest in the national sport. But for a woman to draw up a baseball schedule is something else. After several men, who have long been associated with baseball, failed in an attempt to draw up a schedule for the Delaware River Baseball League, Mrs. Alvin Pratt, of Morrisville, wife of the secretary of the league, showed them how to do it.

The umpires of the Delaware River League will be required to wear dark suits and baseball caps, something on the order of the big leagues.

Spotlight on Churchill Downs

By BURNLEY

America's Turf Classic

Always the piece-de-resistance of the year for racing fans, and one of the most glamorous sporting events on the calendar, the Kentucky Derby (Darby, huh!) is being run today over the historic Churchill Downs course.

The value of this classic of classics is $40,000, a rise of $10,000 over last year's purse—yet in spite of the increased stakes, the entries fell off slightly in number this year.

The fact that there were no really outstanding two-year-olds last season makes the current classic even more of an open race than usual. The winter book players will have their share of headaches long before the horses get to the post, as many of the two-year-olds originally entered on the winter book list will not be on hand when the barrier is raised.

The Derby is the test of tests as far as American turfmen are concerned, and there are those who would dispute Man O' War's rating as the greatest of all thoroughbreds on the one ground that he never ran in the Kentucky classic.

Col. Matt Winn, veteran horseman who is in charge at Churchill Downs, will never admit that Man O' War is the top horse of 'em all for that very reason, since in Winn's opinion the famous thoroughbred cannot be rated as supreme without having passed the acid test of the Derby.

The likeable Master of Churchill Downs has everything set today for the colorful spectacle, and all the thousands of spectators who converge on the famous Blue Grass racing center from all parts of the country will be assured of witnessing a thrilling and unforgettable spectacle.

The winner? Ask me that one late this afternoon. I won't say who I'm picking—it might jinx the horses. Anyway, the bookies are sure to win! (Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

TWO-MAN BOWLING TEAMS ROLL VERY CLOSE SCORE

In the two man bowling tournament a very close match was rolled. Stoneback and Milnor winning 2 of the 3 games.

ALIBI TOO GOOD

CLEVELAND, O. — (INS)—A "perfect alibi" failed so John Gilbert had to appear before Police Judge Jacob Stael to answer charges of speeding 64 miles an hour down an east side street here. When a motorcycle policeman stopped Gilbert, the latter said he was taking his wife to a hospital. Huston sped ahead of the Gilbert car with siren screaming, clearing the way of traffic and pedestrians. The hospital, attaches said Gilbert had made no reservation, doctors said nothing was wrong with Mrs. Gilbert, and Huston booked Gilbert for speeding.

FOURTH WARD BOYS HEAD JUNIOR DIVISION

Fourth Ward annexed the baseball championship of the junior division of Youth Week by trimming the Croydon youths, 11-9, in a wild game of baseball played on Leedom's field yesterday afternoon.

A home-run from the bat of "Billy" Harkins added the Fourth Warders in garnering their victory. In the fourth inning Harkins connected with a Swope pitch and whaled it right between right and center for the four-base ply.

In checking in with the victory, the Fourth Ward club registered three double-plays and also checked a last inning rally by Morgan's boys with a double-killing in the final stanza. The playing of the entire winners' inner cordon featured the contest.

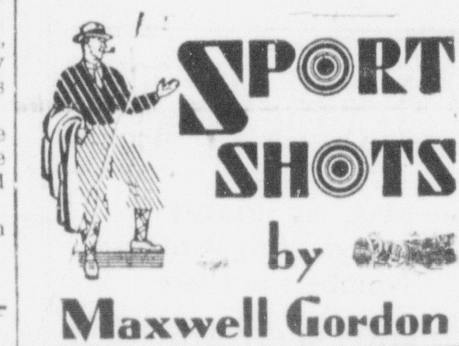

Devote was the outstanding star of the losing aggregation.

The senior finals will be played on Monday on Leedom's field.

John H. Wichser, second ward councilman, gave the bowlers a thrill the other evening at the Elks Bowling League meet in Pottstown. John, who is manager of the local lodge team and no shakes as a star, astounded the assemblage with his playing on the up-state alleys.

Mr. Wichser simply knocked everyone off their feet with his accurate handling of the ball... the smiling councilman was high scorer, defeating all the experts present...

When the games were over someone asked him how he did it and he replied that he had been training on the roof of a house he was repairing during lunch time... We have often heard that working in high altitudes had a strange effect on one.

On Thursday, Mrs. Otto Grupp, Mrs. Griffith, Mrs. Charles Friday, Mrs. William Wilkie, Mrs. Thomas Dolde, Mrs. Arthur Wilkinson, and Mrs. H. Frederick enjoyed the morning and evening at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel and the afternoon at the Academy of Music. At the latter they were delighted with the singing of the Westminster Choir. The other sessions were at the 50th convention of the Needlework Guild of America. During the period 46,881,000 garments have been given the needy. Croydon Needlework Guild would desire new members to join them on Wednesday afternoon to help in this useful work.

8 SCHOOLS TO COMPETE IN PENN-JERSEY MEET TODAY

GEORGE SCHOOL, May 4—Eight schools will compete in the annual Penn-Jersey track meet and nine in the tennis tournament to be conducted under the auspices of the George School here this afternoon.

These two meets were originated nearly a decade ago in the old Penn-Jersey Private Schools organization, which has since disbanded. The affairs have been carried on by George School since 1932.

The entry list is composed of schools from the Trenton and Philadelphia areas. The Hun School, of Princeton; Pennington Prep, Montclair Academy, Newark Academy, Wenonah Military Academy, Bordentown Military Academy, Trenton Central High, all from New Jersey, and Solebury School, Germantown Friends School, Upper Darby H. S., Abington High, St. Andrews, from Middletown, Del., and the George School will all send entries.

Stanley B. Sutton, director of athletics at George School, is directing the meet, with assistance in the tennis division from Norman Swayne, tennis instructor at the school.

The track meet will consist of regular events in the standard intercollegiate order. For the past several years, George School has made a run-away of the meet, but this year its track team is far below standard, leaving the way open for another school to annex top honors. Only one letterman, Dick Adams, who competes in the hurdle events, has returned to Sutton.

Hun, Wenonah, Solebury, B. M. I., Abington, Trenton, Germantown and George School will compete in the track meet.

In the tennis tournament, a plan will be followed whereby each boy will compete only against boys in his own class. All the No. 1 players will be crowned, as will the No. 2's, No. 3's and No. 4's, with champions in each division. There will also be a consolation tournament for those who lose their first round matches. Hun, Montclair, Newark, Pennington, Trenton, Upper Darby, St. Andrews and George School have filed tennis entries.

The track meet will begin at 2 p. m. and the tennis at 9 a. m. In case of rain, the tennis tournament will be cancelled.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

SPRING fruits and vegetables are at their peak in abundance and much lower in price than they have been. Especially choice are strawberries, pineapples, rhubarb, green peas, stringless beans, asparagus, spinach and tomatoes. New cabbage and onions are in market and somewhat cheaper than they have been. New potatoes are still high.

Both fresh and salt water fish are abundant and moderate or low in price. Poultry is still relatively cheaper than any of the meats but lamb, butter and egg retails are about the same as last week but may change at any time.

Here are three menus made up of reasonably priced foods adapted to different budget levels:

Low Cost Dinner
Braised Neck Slices of Lamb
Mashed Potatoes

ONE BULLET, TWO FOXES

MUNICH—(INS)—A "sporting" feat of Christopher Moederl, a farmer of Rosenheim, has been rewarded by the local Sports Club. Moederl was taking his gun to the village to have the sights adjusted when, climbing a fence, he slipped and the gun went off. By an extraordinary fluke the bullet hit a young fox in the neck, passed completely through, struck a rock, and on the ricochet killed the vixen who was following her mate. And the farmer said he "didn't even know the gun was loaded."
